It's significantly less harmful

Public Health England's latest research suggests vaping is actually significantly less harmful than smoking.

Smokers who completely switch to vaping can dramatically reduce their risks of developing smoking-related illnesses including heart disease, cancer and respiratory diseases.

Most of the dangerous toxins found in tobacco, such as tar and carbon monoxide, are not present in e-cigarettes. It is these toxins that cause most of the harm to your health.

E-cigarettes contain nicotine. Nicotine is the addictive substance that makes people continue smoking, but it does not cause serious harm to your health.

With stats like these, isn't it worth giving quitting or switching a go?

It's helping thousands of people to quit

Public Health England believes e-cigarettes are helping at least 20,000 people to stop smoking.

Here in Sheffield, we're already seeing lots of smokers use e-cigarettes as a way to break their habit for good.

Vaping: The truth

Safety regulations have increased

The Tobacco Products Directive is a new set of rules for e-cigarettes to ensure a minimum standard for quality and safety.

This means it's harder for poor-quality products to enter the market, giving you more confidence in the e-cigarettes you buy.

E-cigarettes are not recommended for use by non-smokers and children under 18. There are now rules to protect children from starting to use these products including the introduction of childproof packaging and a new law preventing the sale of e-cigarettes to under 18s.

There's never been a better time to quit. Start your journey to a smokefree future today.

It could save you £840 a year

The average smoker spends £1,600 a year (based on national average of 11.3 cigarettes per day).

Compare that to the average e-cigarette user who buys e-liquids and equipment from supermarkets. They only spend around £760 – a huge saving of £840.

How would you spend that extra money? Maybe a family holiday, or put it towards paying household bills?

Vaping is unlikely to be harmful to others

When you smoke a traditional cigarette, it harms you and those around you. E-cigarettes give off a vapour that is unlikely to be harmful to bystanders.

To date, Public Health England reports that there have been no identified health risks from secondhand e-cigarette vapour.

Remember not to vape in front of children – especially as they copy what adults do. Inhaling chemicals is bad for developing lungs, and could contribute to respiratory conditions. Always keep e-cigarettes and e-liquids out of reach of children.

Even if you're not ready to quit smoking, switching to e-cigarettes completely could protect you and your loved ones from the harms of tobacco.
